Baby Kaylee's parents, Jason Wallace and Crystal Vitelli, welcome her home Thursday in Bradford. Kaylee was released from the Hospital for Sick Children and transported by limousine and helicopter to her home after a well-publicized stay in hospital.

Defying the odds

Baby Kaylee leaves hospital for first time since birth

No one expected baby Kaylee Vitelli to live — not her doctors at the world-renowned Hospital for Sick Children, and certainly not her parents.

And yet the critically ill girl, who was removed from life-support last month with the intention of having her heart transplanted into another ailing child, arrived home Thursday to be cared for by her family instead of medical staff.

Swaddled in a yellow blanket and wearing a flowery sundress, the three-month-old gurgled happily and breathed loudly — punctuated by short bursts of crying — as her mother cradled her inside the family home.

The girl was discharged from hospital earlier in the day and transported in a dramatic fashion — partly via limousine and helicopter — to her grandparents' home in Bradford.

"We wanted her home, we wanted to have our child beside us," Kaylee's father Jason Wallace said outside the two-storey brick house as curious neighbours gawked.

"It's (been) a very emotional trip for us. The roller-coaster is still going to move forward. But she's going to have two parents, family and great friends that support her through whatever difficulty she has."

Fluffy Spadina may lure hackers: Watchdog

Canada's privacy commissioner suggests you think twice about Twittering your porn name — because it could lead to hackers stealing your real name.

A recent blog post by one of Jennifer Stoddart's staffers recommends that users of online social networks — like Twitter, Facebook and MySpace — opt out of playing a name game that's making the rounds.

ID theft

- Archived emails with passwords for other sites — particularly online banking sites — would be a gold mine for hackers and those looking to perpetrate identity theft crimes.

The warning specifically targets users of Twitter who may have recently seen their friends announce they have a new adult-film star pseudonym.

Anyone can play the game by combining their first pet's name with the name of the first street on which they lived. Experts say hackers could be mining the porn names of Internet users, linking them with email addresses listed in Twitter or Facebook accounts with the hope of cracking the inbox and doing further damage from there.

More gunfire in North York

Two teenage boys are in police custody after shots were fired at a North York playground, marking the fourth instance of gun play in the area in a little more than 30 hours. Around midnight Wednesday, police were called to a complex of highrise apartment buildings on Falstaff Avenue, near Jane Street and Highway 401. Shooters standing between two of the buildings had peppered another highrise with several shots. No one was hit. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

GM won't maintain 20%

Targets unlikely despite promises to Ontario and feds

An analysis of General Motors' production plans for the next six years shows the company will not maintain 20 per cent of its North American output in Canada despite what it has told the federal and Ontario governments.

The analysis by industry adviser AutomotiveCompass indicates GM Canada will not provide more than 14.5 per cent of the company's North American volume between now and 2015, with the proportion falling as low as 12.2 per cent next year.

By comparison, GM Canada produced 22.1 per cent of the company's North American volume in 2007.

In February, GM Canada promised the federal and Ontario governments it would maintain its current share of production in order to receive a long-term bailout loan of $6 billion — about 20 per cent of what it had requested from the U.S. government.

AutomotiveCompass president Bill Pochiluk said if the Canadian governments agree to give GM the $6 billion it has requested, they may be overpaying by about $1.5 billion, given its production plans.

Pochiluk said the closure of GM's truck plant in Oshawa, which produced its last vehicle Thursday, putting 2,600 people out of work, is a harbinger of things to come.

"Truck production at Oshawa was more than just truck production, it's the most profitable platform General Motors has, and when they take away a big chunk of the most profitable platform they have and move it someplace else, I think that was a very bad sign right there," he said.

Premier Dalton McGuinty said Thursday he'll fight to keep 20 per cent of GM's production in the province, adding production levels are still under negotiation as part of the government aid package to the struggling automaker.

Watch those fingers

Would you put your hand in a pool filled with sharks and stingrays?

Starting Friday, visitors at the Toronto Zoo will get a chance to be up close and personal with two of marine life's most fascinating creatures.

The zoo has taken its stingray exhibit to the next level by adding sharks to the mix in its Stingray Bay exhibit.

Crowds of curious visitors are expected to flock to the exhibit this season. Natalie Sacks, a supervisor for the exhibit, said guests were impressed with the showcase when it opened with just the stingrays last year.

"It's unique because people get to touch the animals and interact with them," Sacks said yesterday while Fran, a nurse shark, cruised by the edge of the low-sided pool.

Visitors hoping to conquer their fears of sea creatures that are known for their stings and sharp teeth must have a quick hand wash and remove all jewelry before they are permitted to gently touch the eight sharks and more than two dozen stingrays while they swim around in a massive pool filled with saltwater.

Sacks added the exhibit is perfectly safe because the stingrays' potentially dangerous barbs have been removed and the sharks are not aggressive, plus, they are well fed and trained to interact with humans.

The exhibit runs until October and costs an extra $3 on top of general admission. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Protect our pensions, say autoworkers

RALLY Hundreds of retired autoworkers packed the parking lot in front of the office of Ontario Finance Minister Dwight Duncan Thursday to demand stronger pension protection. Duncan's office in Windsor is one of four locations where the retired autoworkers plan to rally again Friday to ask the government to maintain the Pension Benefits Guarantee Fund.

Pension experts estimate GM's pension shortfall could top $6 billion. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Peak power becoming more pricey

Dining fashionably late — really late — will get cheaper as Toronto Hydro moves to a new pricing system that charges residents different rates depending on when they use electricity.

The cheapest rates? Weekends, holidays and the overnight period from 10 p.m. to 7 a.m. Most expensive? At least in summer, during the heat of the day, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The high peak rates are intended to prompt consumers to use power-hungry appliances as little as possible during peak demand times.

On very hot and very cold days, demand can outstrip supply, causing brownouts and blackouts. Expensive generating stations must be built to cover these short periods — and sit idle most of the year.

The 10,000 randomly selected customers will go on time-of-use rates starting June 1. Customers will be notified before the switch. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

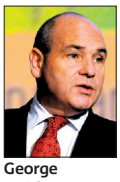
Green energy act passes

New legislation the Liberal government promised would create 50,000 new jobs and make more room for renewable energy passed in the Ontario legislature Thursday, amid warnings from environmentalists the province remains too dependent on nuclear power.

The Green Energy Act, touted as a key piece of legislation that will transform the province's struggling economy, passed third reading by a vote of 59 to 13, with opposition from the Progressive Conservatives.



George Smitherman

The Tories have long argued some of the measures in the act amount to extra costs for already strapped consumers.

However, Energy Minister George Smitherman said the government is taking steps to help people lower their power bills, such as introducing time-of-day pricing for electricity, and noted the legislation would make it easier for the province to bring renewable energy projects online.

The Green Energy Act also replaces a patchwork of local bylaws with province-wide standards to govern where energy projects can be located.

Environmentalists complained Thursday the plan relies too heavily on nuclear power, and said the real test of the Green Energy Act will come next month when the government announces whether Ontario will build new nuclear plants.

"If the government is sincerely interested in expanding green power, it's going to say no to new nuclear plants," said Greenpeace spokesman Shawn-Patrick Stensil. THE CANADIAN PRESS

More at-risk youth sticking it out

They are the first in their families ever to go to university and the first to admit it is not easy.

But a mentoring program for "first-generation" kids like them, plus the friendship of the campus United Black Students club helped Diandra Hayles and Erik Flowchild feel part of Ryerson University.

Now in second year and doing well, Hayles and Flowchild belong to a growing group of at-risk students choosing to stay and graduate from Ontario's colleges and universities, according to data released Thursday by Queen's Park.

In the past five years, the graduation rate for universities across Ontario has climbed to 78 per cent and for community colleges, the graduation rate has increased to 65 per cent, said John Milloy, Ontario's minister of training, colleges and universities.

At Ryerson, the graduation rate has climbed to 76 per cent in the past two years, said provost Alan Shepard.

Hayles said she didn't begin to feel like she belonged until she discovered the mentoring program. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Students see protests as social event

TAMIL Protests have turned into a fad and a social event among many Tamil students in Toronto, a Scarborough teenager said yesterday.

Sashya Karunanayake, a 17-year-old L'Amoreaux Collegiate student from a Sinhalese Sri Lankan background, also described being harassed at a small counter-Tamil demonstration in Toronto Wednesday.

Tamil protesters "were threatening us and writing down our licence plate numbers," said Karunanayake at a news conference organized by the Sri Lanka United National Association.

The association paid for the plane that circled Wednesday's Tamil demonstration at the legislature with a banner trailing that read "Protect Canada Stop Tamil Tigers!" Another poster was hung on a bridge over the Don Valley Parkway. "Why can they protest and I don't have a voice?" asked Karunanayake.

Premier calls on feds to end conflict

A day after thousands of Tamil-Canadians staged a boisterous march in Toronto to protest the conflict in northern Sri Lanka, Premier Dalton McGuinty raised the issue in the Ontario legislature.

McGuinty said thousands of civilians are dying in the South Asian country, and Ottawa must do what it can to stop the bloodshed.

He urged the federal government and the United Nations to pressure all sides to bring an end to the conflict.

McGuinty also called for journalists, aid workers and international observers to be allowed to enter northern Sri Lanka.

The premier, whose daughter spent time as an aid worker in the country, said Ontario has a responsibility to speak out whenever human rights are violated. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Taser biggest factor in death: Expert

An epidemiologist says multiple stuns with a Taser were likely the most significant factor in Robert Dziekanski's death. Dziekanski died at Vancouver's airport in October 2007 after being confronted by a group of RCMP officers and jolted several times with the stun gun. A public inquiry into his death has heard from an array of medical experts, some saying the Taser played a part and others — mainly those paid by the weapon's manufacturer — insisting it had no impact. McGuinty wants EI reform, not election

POLITICS His federal cousins may be itching for an election, but Ontario Premier Dalton McGuinty doesn't want Canadians to have to head to the polls over employment insurance reforms.

The Liberal premier has long decried what he calls a lack of fairness in a program that gives unemployed Ontario residents about $4,000 less than jobless workers in other provinces.

But while federal Liberal Leader Michael Ignatieff threatened an election a few weeks ago over what he calls a failure to set a minimum threshold of 360 hours to collect benefits, McGuinty isn't willing to go that far.

"I'm not looking for an election," McGuinty said Thursday. "I'm looking for somebody to fix employment insurance."

Mulroney in hot seat

Former PM grilled over silence on payment

Brian Mulroney and his credibility were challenged Thursday over his failure to disclose secret payments from Karlheinz Schreiber when questioned under oath 13 years ago.

Richard Wolson, lawyer for the inquiry looking into the former prime minister's dealings with the German-Canadian businessman, zeroed in on selective answers Mulroney gave in his libel suit against the government over Airbus.

At the time, Mulroney had accepted at least $225,000 in cash-stuffed envelopes from Schreiber, but kept the money secret. He didn't declare it to the tax man for six years — after news of the payments threatened to leak out.

Mulroney volunteered some information about Schreiber in the 1996 libel deposition, saying he had met the German-Canadian businessman "once or twice for coffee."

ADRIAN WYLD/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Lead Commission Counsel Richard Wolson questions former prime minister Brian Mulroney in Ottawa Thursday.

But he never mentioned that he had taken cash from Schreiber. He told the inquiry that was because the lawyers who questioned him under oath didn't ask the right questions.

The 1996 hearing was part of a successful libel action Mulroney launched against the RCMP for accusing him of taking kickbacks while he was still in power. THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Toronto Transit Commission has been named the 2009 Gold Award winner at the American Public Transportation Association (APTA) Bus Safety Awards in Seattle, Washington. Congratulations to all of our employees on this noteworthy recognition.

The APTA Gold Award recognizes the TTC's commitment to improving safety for its customers and employees through its Work Safe - Home Safe initiative. The goal of Work Safe - Home Safe is to reduce employee lost time injuries by 60 percent over the next three years. In the last 12 months, injuries have already been reduced by 25 percent.

In addition to the Gold Award, congratulations to TTC Bus Operator Bruce Reid, from our Arrow Road Division, who received individual recognition by finishing 5th in a field of over 50 competitors who took part in the APTA 2009 International Bus Roadeo Driving Skills Competition.

We're proud of our employees, and we're equally proud to serve Toronto. The TTC is committed to safe, reliable and courteous service for the 1.5 million people who use the TTC everyday.

Teen charged with stealing officer's gun

BARRIE A 17-year-old boy has been charged with stealing a gun and ammunition from an unmarked police car in Barrie.

Police say the teen and a friend were rummaging in vehicles on a residential street in mid-April.

The pair found a semi-automatic rifle and ammunition inside a canvas case in the back seat of a car that belongs to a provincial police officer.

Police say the car's doors were unlocked.

Selling sex to pay debts

KRISTA SYLVESTER
Metro Canada

Overwhelming student loans and escalating medical bills have sent a 21-year-old Calgary student to the underground Internet sex trade to make ends meet. But she isn't alone.

With simple S-E-X keystrokes, men can access hundreds of Calgary women selling sexual indulgences through Craigslist's "erotic services" category, but "Eve" insists she doesn't sell intercourse and only provides pictures and videos.

But perhaps more alarming is why she is doing it. Eve said she was diagnosed with cancer last year and began taking unapproved medication, propelling her to a $50,000 debt.

Another young woman, "Jane," 19, posts "sugar daddy" Craigslist ads to overcome her $40,000 debt from school expenses, but she admits to meeting the usually married men in person.

Dr. Keiji Fukuda, assistant director-general of the World Health Organization, talks about the pros and cons of making a swine flu vaccine Thursday at the WHO headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland.

Vaccine conundrum

Flu Outbreak

Tough choices were on the table as experts that counsel the World Health Organization on vaccine issues met Thursday to discuss the pros and cons of making a vaccine for influenza A (H1N1), also known as swine flu.

Dr. Marie-Paule Kieny, the head of the agency's vaccine research initiative, has already said she expects wide-scale production of a vaccine for the new H1N1 virus to be given a green light.

But balancing the need for the new product and the need for a vaccine to protect against seasonal flu strains that are still circulating will make for a difficult balancing act, experts said.

The WHO's leading influenza expert suggested the uncertainty inherent in the current situation makes the questions about vaccine production "enormously complicated." Dr. Keiji Fukuda said answers to all of the pending questions cannot be arrived at in a single meeting.

Theory dismissed

- The World Health Organization says virus experts have dismissed the theory that the H1N1 swine flu may have originated in a laboratory. Scientists concluded it was more likely the new virus emerged naturally, as is common with influenza.

PM warns deficit may grow bigger

Prime Minister Stephen Harper is suggesting the federal deficit, pegged at $85 billion over the next five years, could get bigger to fight the recession.

Harper told Quebec mayors Thursday that negative balance sheets will grow "as large as they have to" while the economy struggles to recover.

The remarks follow forecasts from public- and private-sector analysts warning the deficit will balloon because the economy and tax revenues have plunged more than expected.

The prime minister now is dropping hints that figures from the federal Finance Department may get worse.

The Tory government has projected a $34-billion deficit for 2009-10 and an $85-billion shortfall by 2013.

He said Canada can afford to run temporary deficits because of its relative fiscal strength compared with other countries. Harper said Canada's debt-to-GDP ratio is the envy of developed countries, and the country can afford a flurry of spending.

Viewers allowed to opt out of Fox News

Some Canadian television viewers still steamed over the country's military being trashed on a Fox News show two months ago will be able to keep the channel out of their homes.

Fox News is beamed into the homes of about 700,000 Shaw Communications customers.

The Fox News Red Eye show, which in March featured a group of pundits taking turns trashing Canada and its reliability as an ally, caused a national uproar, with the Canadian government calling it "despicable" and "disgusting."

Shaw Communications president Peter Bissonnette said customers now will have the option of having Fox News removed from their programming and replaced with another channel at no extra cost.

He said although viewers don't have to watch it, for many it has become a "moral issue" and they don't want it coming into their homes.

Host Greg Gutfeld, who said Red Eye is a satiric take on the news, issued an apology after controversy swirled around the talk-show segment, which was taped just before four more Canadian soldiers died in Afghanistan.

Bissonnette said Shaw contractually is required to offer Fox News, so cancelling it was not an option. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Neighbours rush to rescue trapped woman in blaze

QUEBEC Three men are being hailed as heroes for rescuing a neighbour who was trapped inside a burning house in rural Quebec.

Gunter Lambeets said he and the two other men heard a woman screaming for help from inside the home early Wednesday.

Lambeets said they took turns entering the home, but couldn't immediately find her because of the blinding, black smoke.

They eventually pulled the semi-conscious woman onto the lawn as the flames closed in on the home in Hemmingford Township, south of Montreal.

The director of the local fire department said the woman, who is in her 70s, should recover, but her son suffered severe burns and will remain in hospital. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Fatal fiery crash in Ottawa
One person is dead following a fiery single-vehicle crash Thursday near downtown Ottawa. Police say an SUV slammed into a concrete pillar below an overpass and burst into flames. THE CANADIAN PRESS

A 'double-burn' of heart tissue

HEALTH A Canadian-led study suggests performing a "double burn" of cardiovascular tissue is the most effective way to treat patients with an irregular heartbeat known as atrial fibrillation. Researchers found that burning tissue around pulmonary veins to create a scar that blocks abnormal signals to the heart, then adding a newer procedure that burns "hot spots" in the heart itself helps patients the most. The study, led by Dr. Atul Verma of Southlake Regional Health Centre north of Toronto, was presented at the Heart Rhythm Society's meeting in Boston. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Beazley and local RCMP are investigating. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ban school travel in bad weather: Inquest

Dale Branch lost his son 16 months ago in a horrifying highway crash in New Brunswick, but now he hopes lessons will be learned after a coroner's jury called Thursday for strict new limits on school travel in bad weather.

Outside the courthouse where the inquest's 24 recommendations were released, Branch fought back tears as he expressed his gratitude for the jury's work on behalf of his son and the seven others who died on Jan. 12, 2008, just outside Bathurst.

"What I really feel is that Codey did not just die, and nothing will be done about it," said Branch.

"Hopefully through this, this does not happen to another family again. That's what I hope."

ANDREW VAUGHAN/CP

Isabelle Hains, left, and Ana Acevedo, whose sons died in the van crash, leave the court in Bathurst, N.B. Thursday.

The five-member jury heard eight days of testimony into the collision on a slush-covered highway that claimed the lives of seven members of the Bathurst High School boys basketball team and the wife of their coach.

The coroner's jury is calling for external audits to ensure schools follow provincial transportation regulations, and it wants a policy developed that would essentially ban school travel to and from off-site extracurricular events in bad weather.

Doctors abandon hospital

Thousands of Sri Lankans escape war zone under rebel fire

Doctors and aides abandoned the only hospital in Sri Lanka's war zone amid shell attacks, a health official said Thursday.

The military said thousands of civilians braved rebel gunfire and fled across the front lines.

The medical staff was huddling in a nearby bunker because of the non-stop shelling, and could hear the cries of hundreds of patients unable to leave begging for food and water, according to a health official.

As the military pressed ahead with its offensive, 2,700 civilians waded across the lagoon and into government-controlled territory under a hail of rebel gunfire, military spokesman Brig. Udaya Nanayakkara said.

Most of the civilians managed to escape, though four were killed and 14 others wounded, he said. Another 2,000 civilians were on the far shore, still waiting to cross the lagoon, he said.

The rebels have denied accusations they were holding the civilians as human shields and shooting at those trying to flee.

Facebook, Twitter faceoff

CYBERSPACE Bob Baker disdains Twitter, considers it one of the 21st century's great wastes of time and has no interest in knowing when you wake up, when you go to bed or what you do in between.

The 60-year-old Los Angeles writer is a Facebook man and, like the proverbial old dog, figures he may not be capable of adapting to yet another new social network.

"Twitter immediately grabbed the young texting set, people who like to send out little blasts of information," clinical psychologist Karen North says.

Facebookers are seen as older, less into expressing their most random thoughts and more into leisurely online socializing. And MySpacers? Some compare their site of choice to last year's hot night spot that has lost much of its buzz to younger joints like Twitter.

Hubble telescope gets gigantic new camera

SPACE Spacewalking astronauts installed a new piano-sized camera on the Hubble Space Telescope Thursday, the first step to making the observatory more powerful than ever.

The repair job — all the more dangerous because of the high, debris-ridden orbit — got off to a slow start. John Grunsfeld and Andrew Feustel had trouble removing the old camera from the telescope because of a stubborn bolt.

The effort put the astronauts a little behind schedule in their first spacewalk of shuttle Atlantis' mission. In all, five high-risk spacewalks are planned to fix Hubble's broken parts and plug in higher-tech science instruments.

The newly inserted wide-field and planetary camera — worth $132 million US — will allow astronomers to peer deeper into the universe, to within 500 million to 600 million years of creation.

VOTING India's legion of political parties positioned themselves to form new alliances Thursday as preliminary exit polls from the national election indicated that no party won anything close to a majority in parliament.

Researchers scale back sea level rise

RISE The global sea level will only rise about three metres if the West Antarctic ice sheet collapses.

While that may not sound so great to residents of coastal cities like New York or Los Angeles, it is only about half the previously predicted rise.

Researchers led by Jonathan L. Bamber of the University of Bristol in Britain report their recalculation of the hazard in Friday's edition of the journal Science.

However, they add, the maximum increase is expected along the East and West Coasts of the United States, where the water could rise as much as 25 per cent more than in other regions.

The West Antarctic Ice Sheet can be unstable and has long concerned researchers, who fear it could collapse as a result of global warming.

DO YOU NEED A DETOX?

	YES	NO
Are you often tired?	■	■
Do you get headaches frequently?	■	■
Do you have a hard time losing weight?	■	■
Are you bloated or retaining water?	■	■
Mental cloudiness?	■	■
Is your skin getting bad?	■	■

These symptoms above are some of the most common signs of toxic overload, and detoxing once or twice a year is often recommended as a solution. In a recent study of 116 women in the UK, 70% were satisfied or very satisfied with the results from their Biofirm detox.

I unjunked my body!

Lina works in the fitness industry in Ottawa and recently came across an article on detoxing. Here is her story;

"I was having a hard time losing those stubborn extra pounds and I was tired a lot, which showed in my face. So when I came across a Biofirm story in the local newspaper, it made me curious.

It definitely made sense to me that we get tired and bloated from too many toxins in our foods and from our environment. But I didn't know that it made us gain weight! So I purchased a box of Biofirm and took the recommended 6 tablets a day for a month with lots of water and high-fibre foods. I was determined to unjunk my body!"

I lost 11 pounds on the detox!

"In the first 4 weeks I lost 7 pounds. I definitely felt lighter and my skin was looking great – I was glowing! I had read that it could be unpleasant to take Biofirm but I actually enjoyed it, especially because you are still able to do your daily duties. You don't have to stay home or do it on the weekends.

After the 30 days detox, I wanted to continue, so I bought another 14 days of tablets. Again, I lost another 4 pounds and my clothes were getting very loose! I was thrilled - and the great part is that I didn't have to exercise vigorously for 6 weeks!!"

– Line B., Ottawa

DETOXING: A GREAT WAY TO START A HEALTHIER LIFE

Everyday, our bodies are exposed to toxins from the air we breathe, the water we drink and especially the processed foods we eat. If our bodies get overburden with toxins, our liver suffers and we start seeing the effect on our health; Our skin is affected, we get tired, we retain water, get headaches, digestion problems, bad breath and find it especially hard to lose weight.

Researchers have now discovered the biological cause of those stubborn pounds; Toxic particles bind water in the bodies' soft tissue and inhibit your metabolism from burning fat efficiently. The Conclusion: To lose weight, you must first cleanse your body!

Torture policies from Bush era dog Obama

The grim issue of torture is vexing U.S. President Barack Obama and his party.

Nancy Pelosi, the Speaker of the House, came out swinging Thursday in the face of relentless attacks from Republicans who accuse her of knowing in 2003 that terrorist suspects were being waterboarded and failing to speak up.

"They misrepresented every step of the way, and they don't want that focus on them, so they try to turn the focus on us," Pelosi said of Republican efforts to implicate her in the interrogation policies of George W. Bush.

"They don't want that focus on them, so they try to turn the focus on us."
Nancy Pelosi, Speaker

Pelosi accused the CIA and Bush administration officials of misleading her.

Meanwhile, Obama is under fire for reversing his position on releasing photos that show American soldiers abusing detainees in Iraq and Afghanistan.

But some wonder if a shrewd Obama has a long game in sight, knowing his change of heart would appease his critics on the right and in the military but knowing the photos are likely to be ordered released by the courts anyway. THE CANADIAN PRESS

15 sailors hostage on hijacked ship

MILITANTS Nigerian militants hijacked an oil industry ship and were holding 15 Filipino sailors hostage Thursday as the gunmen demanded that oil workers leave the southern Niger Delta within days.

The Movement for the Emancipation of the Niger Delta said the region's fighters hijacked the ship late Wednesday, then destroyed five gunboats in attacks on two military bases Thursday, a day after clashing with security forces. The violence ended months of relative calm after the militants had declared a unilateral ceasefire in their three-year campaign for more oil wealth to be invested in the southern region.

Guiding girls on weight

Arya M. Sharma, MD
Guest Columnist

SunnySide

Anyone interested in promoting the health of young girls is faced with a seemingly impossible challenge. On one hand, in recent years we have seen a dramatic increase in the incidence of eating disorders — now one of the most common and dangerous chronic condition in young women. On the other hand, the obesity epidemic has also adversely affected girls and women, with unprecedented numbers developing excess weight and related health issues, ranging from polycystic ovary syndrome and infertility to Type 2 diabetes and sleep apnea.

While those concerned about eating disorders are careful to not reinforce a negative focus on body weight, those concerned about obesity are unsure how to broach this issue without further diminishing self-esteem. There is clearly concern about the unintended harmful consequences from overweight and obesity prevention initiatives, particularly those delivered in schools. But overemphasis on weight or group weigh-ins can trigger fat prejudice, weight-based teasing, or the ostracizing of larger children, or, cause children to react to healthy eating messages by adopting extreme approaches to dieting and consequently losing weight to a degree that negatively impacts their health.

Girl Guides of Canada
Guides du Canada

Perhaps the common ground lies in recognizing both eating disorders and obesity as psychosocial health issues. At one end of the spectrum girls and young women seek to control their weight by resorting to extreme dieting, excessive exercise and other destructive behaviours. At the other end, girls and young women turn to food to cope with negative emotions, stress, boredom, abandonment, emotional neglect and isolation.

Now, the Girl Guides of Canada have taken up the challenge of dealing with negative body image by introducing the Love Yourself Challenge badge, which girls aged five to 17 can earn by completing tasks that promote self-esteem, healthy eating and a positive body image.

Whether this initiative will indeed help to reduce the risk of eating disorders while promoting healthy weight remains to be seen. Increased self-esteem is clearly beneficial whether you are dealing with under- or overweight people.

The societal causes of eating disorders and obesity may well be the same: Media, advertising, disintegration of nuclear families, lack of role models, loss of control over an excessively demanding, stressful and fast-paced society that takes little time to play, eat or reflect on the things that truly matter in life.

Let us hope that the Girl Guides' approach can manage to help girls walk the fine line between pathological dieting and numbing their emotions with food.

If it can help dissociate self-esteem from body weight, much will have been won.

Tamils should consider course correction

David Jeyaraj
Guest Columnist

Toronto is home to the largest concentration of Sri Lankan Tamils (250,000 plus) outside that island.

Thousands of Tamil Canadians, mainly youths, have participated in rallies, processions, vigils, street demonstrations, sit-ins, fasts, slogan shouting, and the blocking of traffic at peak hours.

Primarily, it is an effort to draw attention to the worsening humanitarian crisis in Sri Lanka.

More than 50,000 Tamil civilians are trapped on a coastal strip in the north.

They are virtual hostages of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE), an organization proscribed as "terrorist" by Canada.

After fighting for decades, the armed forces are poised to overrun the cornered Tigers.

The Tamil Tigers, as they are known, are waging a fierce war to establish an independent state, "Tamil Eelam."

Protests in Toronto and Ottawa are but part of a concerted global campaign by the Tamil diaspora.

The underlying cause is the civilian predicament back "home."

There are daily reports of civilians being killed and injured by aerial bombardment and artillery shelling. Nearly 200,000 civilians were recently displaced and are housed in camps under abysmal conditions.

In this situation, the concern and anxiety of Canadian Tamils for their kith and kin are understandable. They want Ottawa to exert pressure on Sri Lanka and prevent the unfolding humanitarian catastrophe.

Problematic here are the methods adopted to bring about intervention by the Canadian government.

Strident protests are becoming a public nuisance. Motorists and pedestrians are inconvenienced greatly.

Demonstrators are increasingly on a collision course with police. Besieging the Gardiner Expressway Sunday was dangerously controversial.

Instead of winning sympathy from mainstream Toronto, the abrasive protests are incurring resentment and hostility.

Complicating matters further is the identification with the banned LTTE — carrying Tiger flags and chanting slogans for the LTTE raise doubts about a hidden agenda.

Are the protests concerned about the civilian plight alone or getting a reprieve for the LTTE also?

In any case, linking the protests to the Tigers is proving counterproductive as neither the Conservatives nor the Liberals want to be identified with a banned outfit.

There is also the fact that Canada has little clout with Sri Lanka.

We are not a major trading partner or aid-giver. And Canada is not on the UN security council.

Perhaps it's time for Canadian Tamils to review the situation realistically and do a course correction.

Wake up David Caplan! We are not the United States

Re: Premier defends eHealth spending

What is wrong with our (provincial) Health Minister David Caplan?

Why would any sane person compare U.S. President Barack Obama's $50 billion on eHealth with Ontario?

May I remind the honourable minister that Canada is not the United States and Obama is not our president (unfortunately). We are a nation of approximately 30 million people, while the U.S. is a nation of 300 million people. Of course it is justified for the Americans to have a larger budget on everything there. They have a larger tax base.

I'm tired of the myopic view of our ministers these days. Everyone seems to be jumping on the bandwagon of, "Obama is doing this, or saying that, so what's wrong if I do the same."

Excuse me, but we are a separate, sovereign country with our own issues and policies regarding those issues.

Please learn to listen to the pulse of the people, Mr. Caplan, and own up that this agency, like many other government agencies, is providing very little value at our tax expense.

Investors need exit strategy to deal with volatile markets

There are many Canadian investors who are saying "never again" after riding the stock market down more than 40 per cent last year and into this year and have vowed to avoid this sort of carnage next time.

But how? An exit strategy for your investments would go a long way, a method that would allow you to get out of the market when your gains have reached your expectations or when the boom looks ready to turn to bust.

Investors sometimes hold on to stocks long after they should have sold them because of an emotional attachment. Other times, says Paul Thornton, investment adviser at Global Maxfin Capital, investors think they know more than they really do about what's driving the market and their own particular stock.

Just to make sure you don't try to push your luck, a popular way of ditching a stock is initiating a simple stop/loss order.

This means that your stock will automatically be sold once it reaches a certain point, up or down.

Anaheim 3 Detroit 4

Dan Cleary's tiebreaking goal with three minutes left lifted the Detroit Red Wings to a 4-3 win over the Anaheim Ducks Thursday night and sent the defending Stanley Cup champions to the Western Conference finals for the third straight year.

Anaheim's Jonas Hiller made 36 saves, and Chris Osgood stopped 24 shots for the defending champions, who couldn't protect an early two-goal lead.

Jiri Hudler, Darren Helm and Mikael Samuelsson scored for the Red Wings, who will next face the Chicago Blackhawks in a matchup of Original Six teams.

Teemu Selanne and Corey Perry cut into deficits and Bobby Ryan made it 3-3 at 7:37 of the third.

The previous two Cup champions met in the playoffs for the third time since the NHL expanded in 1967, and all three have gone the distance. The Edmonton Oilers needed overtime to get past Calgary in 1991, and Montreal beat Boston by two goals in 1971.

Unlike those winners, second-seeded Detroit was at home against eighth-seeded Anaheim, which knocked off the top-seeded San Jose Sharks in the first round.

Cleary scored the winning goal by stuffing the puck past Hiller after Henrik Zetterberg flipped it into the crease.

"You know, Z was in the corner, made a good play, put it on net, I stayed with it and got it under Hiller," Cleary said.

The pressure is back on the defending champions.

Dwight Howard had 23 points and 22 rebounds after challenging Stan Van Gundy's coaching strategy, and the Orlando Magic beat the Boston Celtics 83-75 Thursday night to force a decisive Game 7.

Rashard Lewis had 20 points, and Hedo Turkoglu made a three-pointer to highlight an 11-2 run to close the game for the Magic, who haven't made it to the conference finals since 1996.

"We came out from the get-go ready to play. That's what it takes," Howard said. "It's all about defence and we played great defence."

Rajon Rondo finished with 19 points, 16 rebounds and six assists, and Paul Pierce scored 17 for the Celtics, who led by 10 points in the second half before falling apart. Game 7 is Sunday in Boston.

The Celtics also failed to close out the Chicago Bulls in Game 6 of their first-round series, a triple-overtime epic. Boston will now go the distance in its first two series for the second straight year. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Blue Jays lose series, only second of season

MLB RESULTS

New York 3 Toronto 2

VS

BASEBALL The Toronto Blue Jays can expect to see a whole lot of CC Sabathia over the coming seven years and the big left-hander demonstrated Thursday just how formidable a challenge facing him is going to be.

The $161-million US man threw eight strong innings and was rewarded for his efforts when Hideki Matsui opened the eighth with a go-ahead solo shot that carried the New York Yankees to a 3-2 victory.

Signed during the winter to be the ace sorely lacked in the Bronx the past few seasons, Sabathia (3-3) delivered an effort befitting a No. 1, particularly in the seventh, when he escaped a first-and-third, one-out jam.

Scott Rolen opened the frame with a double and moved to third on Kevin Millar's fly ball to deep centre. Sabathia intentionally walked Rod Barajas before striking out John McDonald on three pitches, and after a walk to Marco Scutaro, got Aaron Hill on a fielder's choice to keep things tied.

Running through the hard times

Field of Play

Scott Russell

metronews.ca/fieldofplay

Sunny Side

The guy in the store where running shoes are sold had a simple message.

"People run even when they're stressed," he said. Then he punched the cash register and rang up $169 for a new pair of Mizunos while gleefully handing over a box full of hope.

Business is good.

"Maybe people run because they're stressed," replied the customer.

Running events are myriad in this country and even in a period of recession, they seem to be flourishing. A Vancouver 10K boasted 55,000 entrants in April. Earlier this month, 12,000 took part in Sporting Life's annual dash down one of the busiest streets in Toronto. From the Bridge City Boogie in Saskatoon to the Blue Nose International Marathon in Halifax, people are running in record numbers.

"Corporate support is down," said the organizer of the Mississauga Marathon, featuring 12,000 participants in its weekend events. "But there are more runners than ever before …

"In tough times, it's not big business that makes the difference, but the individual."

Bill Rodgers, a four-time winner of the Boston Marathon, was at the start line of the Mississauga Marathon to address competitors before the race. Rodgers had recently returned to the road following surgery for prostate cancer last year. Last month, at age 61, he completed his first Boston Marathon in a decade.

"It was tough, but I made it," he told the runners in Mississauga. "Now you, too, are in the race and everything is on your side, including the weather."

And so the pack got on course as it wound its way to the shores of Lake Ontario. Along the route, runners were aided by 1,200 volunteers who handed out water and energy drinks.

In the end, the Mississauga Marathon raised hundreds of thousands of dollars for a health-care facility, a cancer research unit and the local YMCA.

What is it that drives the running boom across the country in this difficult economic period and that makes it a force in the success of charitable work in Canada?

Perhaps it's the knowledge that getting past these hard times is possible if we all hunker down and stay in the race.

Gemini Award winner and author Scott Russell is the Host of CBC Sports Weekend seen Saturday afternoons.

Jays' Hill wants to rock

Second baseman likes to pump up crowd up with classic guitar riffs

DAVID SINGH
for Metro Toronto

Given his profound love for the guitar, Aaron Hill always enjoys hearing a good classic rock riff. Such pleasure is displayed every time the Jays second baseman steps to the plate at Rogers Centre, as his entrance music is blasted on the stadium speakers.

When Hill strides to the batter's box, the unmistakable guitar licks of Foghat's Slow Ride and Joe Walsh's Life's Been Good are his primary tunes.

Hill, 27, chose those songs at the beginning of the season and, to say the least, has had good luck with the selections.

"I like classic rock and I like those songs and always wanted to come out to them," Hill said with a grin. "I had different ones over the years, but I picked these early and I'll stick with them. There's no reason to change them."

That much is true, given Hill's production as one of Toronto's best hitters in 2009. Returning from last year's season-ending concussion, Hill now leads the club in a number of offensive categories.

While Hill admits that sometimes he is too "locked in" to notice his entry music, he does enjoy the reaction it receives from fans.

"Some of the fans tend to really like the classic rock," he said. "You hear them singing it every once in a while, which is neat because if you get them pumped up, it's only going to help."

Snider, who briefly used rock music while in the minors, believes opening songs can be important to some players.

"When you listen to your iPod as much as a lot of us do, you kind of go through playlists and certain songs that you listen to that get your mind in the right place," Snider said. "For me it was one of those things where the rock music was about done and had no more hits in it, so I switched up."

Before the season started, Aaron Hill changed his entrance music to some classic tunes by Foghat and Joe Walsh.

Windsor, Drummondville early Memorial Cup favourites

MATTHEW WUEST
Metro Canada

JUNIOR HOCKEY The puck drops on the Memorial Cup in Rimouski, Que., Friday night. The following is a breakdown of the teams vying for the Canadian Hockey League's top prize.

Rimouski Oceanic

Despite being hosts, the Oceanic have to be considered an underdog after not even making the QMJHL final. They bowed out in four straight to the Drummondville Voltigeurs in the semifinals and haven't played since April 22.

Oilers draft pick Philippe Cornet, Canadian world junior standout Patrice Cormier and all-star blueliners Marc-Andre Bourdon and Sebastien Piche will try to keep the 2000 Memorial Cup champs afloat.

Drummondville Voltigeurs

Teams will have to find a way to shut down the prolific Voltigeurs, a favourite after averaging nearly six goals per game en route to their first QMJHL title. Playoff MVP Yannick Riendeau (29 goals among 52 points) makes them tick, while blue-liner Dmitry Kulikov is one of the CHL's best.

The loss of Maple Leafs draftee Chris DiDomenico to a broken leg takes some bite out of the offence.

Kelowna Rockets

The Rockets have made four trips to the Memorial Cup in the past seven years. They upset the No. 1-ranked Calgary Hitmen in the WHL final, but can be fairly classed as an underdog along with the Oceanic.

Hulking defenceman Tyler Myers, a Sabres' first-rounder, and Swedish forward Mikael Backlund, a Flames' first-rounder, are players to watch, while forward Jamie Benn led the WHL playoffs with 33 points.

Windsor Spitfires

When Calgary was knocked off in the WHL final, it left Windsor as the top-ranked team at the Memorial Cup.

The tough, skilled Spitfires are led by playoff MVP and 2010 draft prospect Taylor Hall, Russian forward Andre Loktionov, and ultra-skilled defenceman Ryan Ellis. The Spitfires are loaded with talent and widely considered the pre-tournament favourite along with the Voltigeurs.

Bale seeks Salvation

Actor at ease with lighter fare in Terminator sequel

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News

Christian Bale doesn't like being told what to do. In fact, he admits he's been more keen to take a role in a film if others tell him not to.

"Some people were saying to me, 'Why do you want to do that?' Which made me go, 'I'm going to go do it, then,'" Bale explains. "I really want to do it more, the more people say that. Maybe I should cut it out."

The latest film people told him to stay away from is Terminator Salvation, the fourth in the man vs. the machines franchise. Bale steps into the role of John Connor, humanity's only hope against evil killer robots. At first, Bale wasn't interested in taking on another big Hollywood franchise.

"Initially when I heard of this I thought, 'Well, it's done. There's no new story to be told,'" he says. "That was why I said no a few times."

But in the end, Bale agreed, even though the final script hadn't been written. "I just couldn't believe that it couldn't become something that was worthy of people putting down 10 bucks in a movie theatre," he says.

Though he has a reputation as a sometimes too serious, brooding actor — prone to flare-ups like the tirade infamously leaked online last year from the Terminator Salvation set — Bale actually takes a much more relaxed view of his work.

Batman star Christian Bale steps into the role of John Connor in Terminator Salvation, in theatres next week.

Movie Feature

"This is not Brecht or something. This is Terminator," he says, cracking a rare smile. "What are people really going there for? They're going for a good time."

Of course, offering that kind of a good time requires a decent amount of physical work on an actor's part. But for Bale, the challenges were limited. "I've gone through Batman, and that was tougher," he explains. "You don't get humans handwrestling terminators. You've kind of lost by the time you get to that situation."

But there were some aspects of the productions he could've done without — and not just absentminded crew members.

"When they don't position the harnesses correctly, it can really hurt … down there," he deadpans. "You break out in cold sweats."

Soul sucked out of Angels

Angels & Demons
Director: Ron Howard
Stars: Tom Hanks, Ewan McGregor
Classification: 14A
Rating: ●●½

RICHARD CROUSE
for Metro Canada

A scene from Ron Howard's Angels & Demons.

REVIEW Harvard Professor Robert Langdon (Tom Hanks) is back in action. Three years after he uncovered the complicated personal life of Jesus Christ in Da Vinci Code he's once again using his knowledge of symbology to unravel the mystery of a secret brotherhood called the Illuminati and prevent a terrorist act against the Vatican.

What's more, he'll do it all in just one night. Sounds thrilling, yes? Unfortunately it isn't.

Most of the elements from Dan Brown's best-selling book Angels and Demons are in place, although several characters have been omitted and story lines reconfigured and condensed in the name of brevity.

Summarizing the story, however, brings a simplicity that sucks out most of the mystery and colourful details contained in the novel. Langdon seems to be able to unravel clues, some hundreds of years old, with such ease that Angels and Demons becomes simply an elaborate game of connect-the-dots rather than a fully fleshed out story.

It's a big summer movie, so we shouldn't really expect sophisticated North by Northwest style intrigue, but since the suspense lacks the action should take up the slack. Unfortunately though, while A&D wants to be an ecclesiastical National Treasure, it contains few of the thrills of those popular Nic Cage movies.

Director Ron Howard fills the screen with handsome images of Rome but every time the movie works up the steam, Robert (Mr. Exposition) Langdon steps in with a long winded explanation of the history behind the various clues and symbols that sucks much of the movie's momentum.

Angels and Demons isn't as talky as Da Vinci Code, but its fatal flaw is the Langdon character. In the books he is the historical tour guide who provides the facts to bind the story together. On film, however, he comes across as a windbag who simply supports the story instead of adding to it.

That being said, Angels and Demons is a vast improvement over Da Vinci Code. The pace has been ramped up and the running time chopped.

Anybody magical

Is Anybody There?
Director: John Crowley

Classification: PG
Rating: ●●●●

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

Michael Caine stars in Is Anybody There?

Melodramas about seniors living in a nursing home aren't exactly the stuff of summer blockbusters. However, thanks to an amazing performance by Michael Caine, Is Anybody There? deserves at least a shot.

The '80s-set story features Caine as Clarence, a retired-magician with a cantankerous demeanour who reluctantly befriends 10-year-old Edward (Bill Milner) after moving into the youngster's family-run old-folks' home.

While lonely Edward is obsessed with death (he even hides tape recorders under beds trying to capture evidence of souls passing into the afterlife), Clarence is dealing with a fading mind and a dark past. As he tells the boy, "You accumulate regrets and they stick to you like old bruises."

While that may sound morose, the dourness is quickly lifted by plenty of surprising laughs and a load of charm as Clarence discovers redemption through mentoring Edward in the world of magic.

Sure, the film has its share of clichéd characters and moments bordering on mawkish sentimentality but wrapped in an honest, brave script and supported by remarkable performances by Caine and Milner, Is Anybody There? works enough magic to make its flaws mysteriously disappear.

Quirky, con comedy in Bloom

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

Mark Ruffalo, left, and Adrien Brody play con-artist siblings in The Brothers Bloom, coming to theatres next Friday.

FEATURE The Brothers Bloom is one of those movies that must have been an actor's dream to make. And by dream, I mean psychoanalytically.

The quirky comedy tells the tale of two con-artist siblings — older brother Stephen (Mark Ruffalo), who always masterminds the swindle while his disheartened kin Bloom (Adrien Brody) reluctantly plays the lead role, secretly yearning for a life that hasn't been written and conceived by his brother.

Now that's got to get into an actor's head, doesn't it?

"There's a certain kind of crossover that happens," admitted Ruffalo during an interview to promote the film (which opens next Friday).

"I've been working a lot for the past couple of years and you realize you're probably spending more time as somebody else than you are yourself in the course of a day. It's a little dislocating."

"Interestingly, I've gained insight and understanding in my own life from fictional characters I've played because of the work to try and understand their dilemmas," added Brody, who won the Oscar for his role in The Pianist.

"The difference that I have between Bloom is that he doesn't have a life to go to and he's completely paralyzed when he's not invested in a con…he's like a method actor who can't break free from those roles — it's tragic."

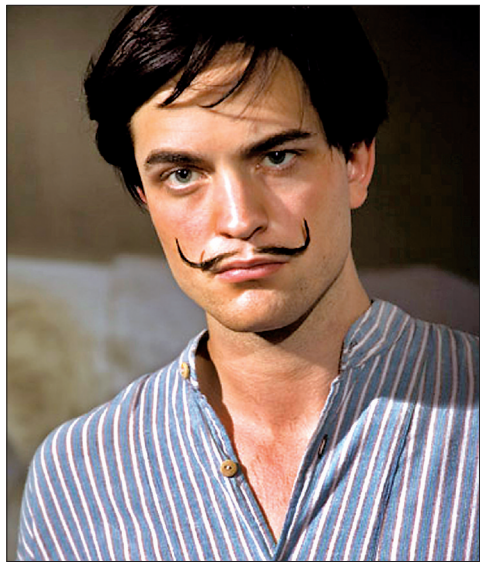
Written by acclaimed sophomore director Rian Johnson, The Brothers Bloom blurs the lines between reality and fantasy creating something of a frenetic fable-heist story.

For those who haven't yet discovered the filmmaker through Brick, his bizarre-but-fascinating freshman noir-drama, the fresh sensibilities will undoubtedly be a new cinematic experience.

"This was such a unique experience for me as an actor," added Brody. "Stylistically and storytelling-wise, it's very complex and rich. I appreciate (Johnson's) depth and ability to do that so I'm a fan of his too."

Pattinson's surreal ride

ANNE BRODIE
for Metro Canada



Robert Pattinson plays a young Salavdor Dali in Little Ashes.

FEATURE Robert Pattinson knew Little Ashes could cause a career firestorm. During the Toronto leg of the Twilight media tour last year, as young female fans screamed for their sexy vampire, he told me he'd play Salvador Dali in a gay themed art house film.

"I thought I was never going to get a job when I did that," says Pattinson. "So it was like, 'Yeah, yeah, I'll do it.' I had nothing to lose."

I ventured to say that Leonardo Di Caprio's career as a teen heart throb wasn't hurt by playing a gay character in Total Eclipse.

Pattison laughed, "The ones in Little Ashes are a little more hardcore!"

Director Paul Morrison's look at the tumultuous early friendship between Dali, Spanish poet Federico Garcia Lorca and filmmaker Luis Buñuel could potentially draw new, young audiences curious to see Pattinson.

But British actor Matthew McNulty who plays Buñuel says he was concerned about the "Pattinson factor."

"We're lucky that he's taken off so much. The only thing is people will come out and review it as being a Robert Pattinson film, not an art house film. They'll have a different take on it. But overall, it's brilliant that more people will see it. It will open people's minds for starters, and then they'll learn about the icons in it and their effect on the world. It will spawn so much more interest and knowledge."

McNulty plays the third wheel in the group, tossed aside when the Dali/Lorca affair begins. His efforts to fit in go badly awry despite his view of himself as an essential part of their radical, idealistic group.

"He was macho. Buñuel is a homophobe and now he's lost his best friend to a man. What did that do to him? It's a big conflict. His radical social and political views go directly against his sexuality."

Queen feels forced

The Queen and I

Director: Nahid Persson Sarvestani
Stars: Nahid Persson Sarvestani, Empress Farah Pahlavi
Classification: STC
Rating:

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

Director Nahid Sarvestani, right, interviews exiled Iranian queen Farah Pahlavi in The Queen and I.

Contrary to what you may think, this is not a campy take on the classic Rodgers and Hammerstein musical. No, The Queen And I is a documentary about a former revolutionary meeting an exiled queen whose monarchy she helped overthrow (yikes ... awkward).

The movie is by documentarian Nahid Persson Sarvestani, an ex-communist who supported the Iranian revolution that forced the ruling royal family to flee the country. Sarvestani later had to leave Iran herself after the new regime killed her brother, making the film a meeting of two Iranians living in exile whose backgrounds couldn't be more different.

At the start of the movie, Nahid Persson Sarvestani admits that she was always fascinated by Empress Farah Pahlavi despite their political differences. The former queen agrees to meet with the filmmaker when she hears of her similar escape from Iran, but quickly shuts down the first interview after learning about Sarvestani's revolutionary past.

The queen eventually agrees to continue shooting, but is clearly on her guard during the rest of the film and Sarvestani is understandably forced to hold back. The director gets some surprisingly candid comments from Empress Pahlavi, even if both parties feel muzzled.

The problem with the movie is that it ends on a disappointing note, concluding that "everyone is the same in this wacky world."

This message feels forced and lazy given the fact that the former queen continues to live a frivolous life of luxury despite her ability to drum up a few passionate political statements.

Feel-good Light for spiritually inclined

Fierce Light: When Spirit Meets Action

Director: Velcrow Ripper
Stars: Daryl Hannah, Alice Walker
Classification: STC
Rating:

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

A scene from Fierce Light.

REVIEW When Velcrow Ripper's friend and fellow activist Brad Will is tragically killed during a civil uprising in Oaxaca, Mexico, the tragic event shocks the Toronto-based filmmaker into searching for the meaning behind activism and the "quest to understand my inner self and its place in the universe."

As such, Ripper sets out with his camera to interview everybody from author Alice Walker to Archbishop Desmond Tutu; a journey which takes him from Gandhi's Phoenix Ashram in South Africa to an endangered urban garden in L.A. where peaceful activists (including actress Daryl Hannah) squat in a tree.

You can't fault Ripper's intent; he definitely wants to aim the spotlight on the notion of what Gandhi labeled "Soul Force" — solution-based activism focused on compassion rather than violence.

However, the film hits its point early and often so while Ripper may travel great distances to collect worldly perspectives, Fierce Light's message is only burdened by reiteration.

Still, with some visually dynamic footage and a feel-good theme of empowerment, Fierce Light will surely knock the Birkenstocks off the spiritually inclined set.

Metro recommends

• Deeper Than Rap, Rick Ross: Ross' heavy rhymes are dressed up with slick production, symphonic beats and A-list guest rappers.

• Fantasy Ride, Ciara: R&B diva's sultry vocals perfectly suit her mix of electro-funky club tracks with guest stars galore.

• White Lies For Dark Times, Ben Harper And Relentless7: Harper's trademark slide guitar sounds right at home with his band's hefty Texas blues-rock style.

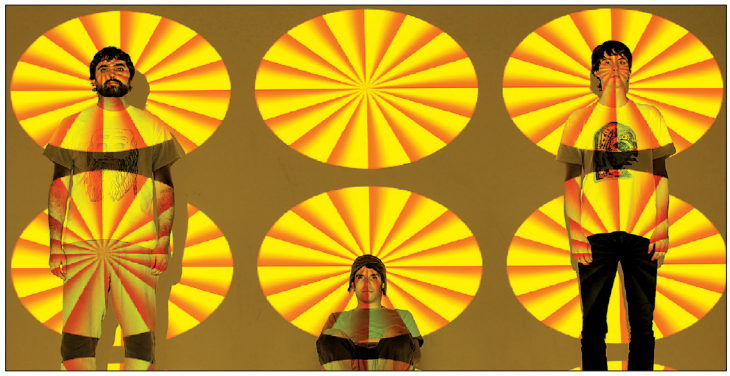
Breaking down Animal Collective

ROB MCMAHON
for Metro Canada

Listening to an Animal Collective record, with its carefully crafted sonic details and convoluted pop melodies, one can spend hours puzzling over song construction.

But when weighing process against product, Brian (Geologist) Weitz, who handles electronics and samples, said he hopes listeners don't focus on song building to the detriment of enjoying the final product.

Asked if the video for My Girls, which shows the group performing the song on instruments and samples, is an invitation to watch the group's creative process, Weitz said that's not the case. Instead, it's the band's cover of the 1977 video for Magic Fly by French space-disco group Space and its "early '80s, Daft Punk thing."



Animal Collective is currently touring in support of its latest album, Merriweather Post Pavilion.

"I think it's hard for people to know what we play, since there's a lot hidden," said Weitz. "For example, My Girls has no real samples of other people's music ... and so a lot of the process is constructing samples. The things that we trigger when we're on stage playing the song are built from something else."

That process begins when the Collective work out a few broad rules on vocal styles, instrumental palettes and the overall atmosphere for each record. For example, Merriweather Post Pavilion was designed in part as a contemplative electronic record that showcases the group's love of dance music and allowed primary songwriter Dave (Avey Tare) Portner to use instruments other than guitar and piano. The result features the rave-era synthesizers and massive basslines of tracks like My Girls and Daily Routine.

"We tried to make a bassier, low-end record in the past ... Danse Manetee had deeper bass than this record, but because we recorded it ourselves with the equipment in our bedrooms, it got lost," said Weitz. "So this time we chose to record with a hip-hop engineer. Some of the really deep basslines — for example on My Girls — we can't play live, since we don't have enough hands on stage."

The band's vocal approach also moves from both sharp dynamic shifts (as heard in works like 2007's Strawberry Jam) and straight-up harmonies to counterpoint melodies between Portner and Noah (Panda Bear) Lennox on tracks like Taste and Guys Eyes.

"On Strawberry Jam, Dave didn't want any double-timing — he wanted the vocals to be just like we are on stage ... one voice at time," he said. "With this record we wanted to get more layered vocals — not all straight-up harmonizing, but working with counterpoint call and response melodies."

Best places to find new music

With billions of songs available, looking for new music (or music that's new to you) can be frustrating and intimidating. Here are a few ways to make things easier.

The Hype Machine (hypem.com): This site scours blog postings and streaming websites for whatever you ask it to. Convenient "buy now" buttons make downloading what you've found a snap.

A New Band a Day (bandaday.com): Just like it sounds: a blog that promises a write up on a new band every day. No options to purchase.

New Band of the Day (http://tinyurl.com/64y36d): A service of Britain's Guardian newspaper. At last count, there are nearly 550 bands in the archives, too. No option to purchase.

Crazed Hits (crazedhits.com): A free talent scout tip sheet featuring hot unsigned bands and artists. This is great if you want to see what the current A&R bidding war might be.

Wearehunted.com (wearehunted.com): What if there was a site that monitored all the other sites where people are looking for new music and then ranked them in a chart? We Are Hunted is a good attempt at monitoring the most popular songs on MySpace Music, BitTorrent, Last.fm, iLike, blogs, Twitter and press releases. Using some clever clustering algorithms, they come up with the Top 99 songs of the day.

ExploreMusic (exploremusic.com): OK, OK, so this is a shameless plug for a site that I curate, but me and the staff sort through hundreds of songs every week so you can get a head start on finding something interesting. And yeah, we can help you buy something you like.

Your local record store: I know so many people who haven't set foot in a proper record store in years. Why not try the old fashioned method of trolling through the racks? It still works — and there's something about the thrill of the hunt, too.

Your favourite radio station: There's a myth that you can't hear anything new on the radio anymore. That's false. You just need to step out of your comfort zone. Try listening to a station you normally wouldn't. You'll be surprised at what you may discover. It may not be new, but it'll be new to you.

The Ongoing History of New Music can be heard on stations across Canada. Read more at ongoinghistory.com and exploremusic.com

Fawcett film hit with lawsuit

Producer in actress' cancer documentary seeks creative control

A producer who has collaborated with Farrah Fawcett is suing over an upcoming documentary about her battle with cancer.

Craig Nevius filed a lawsuit in Santa Monica on Wednesday — the same day Farrah's Story was screened for friends and reporters.

His lawsuit states he is seeking to regain creative control over the documentary and unspecified damages against several of the project's key players.

The lawsuit does not name Fawcett as a defendant, nor seeks to block NBC's prime-time airing of Farrah's Story, scheduled for Friday.

Instead, the suit claims Fawcett's former boyfriend, Ryan O'Neal, his business manager and longtime friend Alana Stewart interfered with his role in the documentary. He also claims O'Neal physically threatened him.

The documentary is a candid look at the former Charlie's Angels actress' battle with anal cancer, which has spread to her liver.

Paul Bloch, a publicist for Fawcett, O'Neal and Stewart, said the lawsuit would be hurtful to Fawcett if she found out about it.

"We are shocked by this type of behaviour," Bloch said. "Here's a woman who everyone knows has been ill and to do something like this is horrific. This has been a very difficult time for Ryan O'Neal.

"When you see something like this, you have to question the motives of someone who can be so hurtful during this very sensitive time in a person's life."

Nevius worked on the reality TV show called Chasing Farrah. In his lawsuit, Nevius states he had a contract to produce a documentary on the 62-year-old Fawcett's cancer treatment in accordance with Fawcett's wishes. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Show the rest of Canada your dancing moves

KRISTEN THOMPSON

DANCE Got moves? Well, warm up your jazz hands and grab your dancing shoes because So You Think You Can Dance Canada is coming to Toronto. Auditions for the second season take place Monday at the Metro Toronto Convention Centre John Bassett Theatre.

Jean Marc Genereux, who is back as a judge, said contestants and dance styles vary across the country.

Vancouver seems to have a lot of trained dancers, while Calgary produced a lot of ballroom dancers, he said.

"It's kind of interesting to see some cities have more of one style and less of another," he said.

"We are a country with so much talent. And people don't go to the ballet anymore, so we've brought dancing back to peoples' homes."

Leah Miller, who is also returning as the show's host, said she was blown away by how talented and humble last year's competitors were.

"The dancers don't get days off. They dance sometimes 14 hours a day," she said. "They're dedicated."

So You Think You Can Dance judge Jean Marc Genereux, left.

Auditions

- Registration begins at 8 a.m. at the Metro Toronto Convention Centre John Bassit Theatre.
- Contestants must be between 19 and 30 years old.

A new fashion frontier

DANIEL HOLLOWAY
Metro World News

How do you dress Mr. Spock in a post-Wolverine world?

The problem no doubt bedevilled director J.J. Abrams and costume designer Michael Kaplan as they set out to make their new Star Trek film. But it looks like they got it right.

Following its opening last week, Trek has proved itself a critical darling and commercial juggernaut — a sci-fi movie that feels contemporary despite constant visual references to its 1966 TV-series roots.

"It didn't look like too much had changed, but it still felt sleek and modern," Dino-Ray Ramos, a fashion writer for sfexaminer.com, says of the film's costuming. "It was wise for them not to dress the character in black leather like in the X-Men films."

Wise indeed. Original Trek is steeped in a colour palette straight out of the psychedelic 1960s. A reboot featuring leather trenches and black Ray-Bans instead of mustard pullovers and micro-miniskirts would have been sacrilege.

Dorothy Baca teaches design for performance at the University of New Mexico and was the costume supervisor on the 1997 film Batman and Robin. She says the original Trek and the equally candy-coloured 1966-68 Batman TV series made loud fashion statements for a loud cultural moment.

"They were indicative of what was going on in the youth culture at that time," Baca says. "If you look at the '60s in terms of clothing and fashion, it's the first time we see a huge boom of things marketed toward young people."

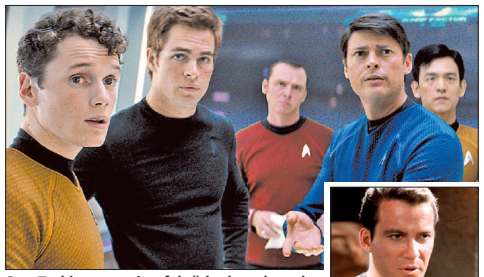
That led commercial and couture designers of the day to create looks that reflected not just a counter-cultural colour scheme, but an obsession with space exploration at a time when the U.S. and the Soviet Union were racing to put a man on the moon.

Ramos sees echoes of Pierre Cardin's work in the updated Trek costuming.

"The uniforms immediately reminded me of his mid-century modern space-age collection," Ramos says. "He did this '60s spacey look."

But bright colours and mid-century enthusiasm have given way to dark characters wearing dark clothes. Ramos points to 2000's X-Men and the black, leather superhero costumes designed by Louise Mingenbach — who also worked on this summer's X-Men Origins: Wolverine — as the turning point. So why did kitsch and colour disappear from science fiction films?

"We're seeing so much black leather is because our society has changed so much and our youth culture has changed quite a bit," Baca says. "The average teen male is probably more jaded, a little bit more worldly than in mid-century. And that's who's going to see these movies."



Star Trek's costuming felt "sleek and modern," in comparison to the original, right.

In brief

FILM People can't seem to get enough of Taylor Swift, so Dateline NBC is devoting an entire hour to the country sensation, featuring behind-the-scenes footage from Swift's tour. The show will air May 31.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Worst (or best) sci-fi/action-adventure costuming ever:

• Batman (TV series, 1966-68)
It's hard to decide which is worse: The eyebrows drawn on Adam West's bat-cowl, or the pornographically short pants that Burt Ward traumatized a generation of TV watchers in as Robin. Actually, it's not that hard. It's the pants.

• Battlestar Galactica (TV series, 1978)
Half the people on this show were dressed like Han Solo. That's a good thing. The bad thing is that the other half were either dressed in Halloween costume-grade robot suits or like space-cult leaders.

• The Black Hole (film, 1979)
Nicknamed 20,000 Leagues Under Space, because, well, it was a lot like 20,000 Leagues Under the Sea, the prime example of slow-moving '70s sci-fi films is also the prime example for horrible robot costumes. Hard to believe it came out two years after Star Wars.

• The Last Starfighter (film, 1984)
Starfighter was to Star Wars what Mac and Me was to E.T. It also featured the most amazing crappy rubber-suit alien costumes of all times. Watching Starfighter must have been what convinced George Lucas to digitally animate all his aliens in the Star Wars prequels.

• The Fantastic Four (film, 1994)
Eleven years before the horrible 2005 movie, there was an even more horrible film about the classic Marvel superheroes made on a shoestring budget to satisfy a legal obligation. The costumes, effects and makeup are among the worst ever committed to film — but still they're somehow more believable than Jessica Alba playing a brilliant scientist.

• Battlefield Earth (film, 2000)
John Travolta produced and starred in this adaptation of Scientology founder L. Ron Hubbards novel about aliens with giant foreheads — and that's why nobody likes John Travolta anymore. The costumes and make-up are as bad as the dialogue, which included plum lines such as, "Exterminate all man-animals at will!"

Lucci snubbed again — even for a nom

EMMYS Often snubbed for a Daytime Emmy in the past, Susan Lucci has been jilted as a nominee this year.

Missing along with the All My Children veteran is The View, overlooked as a best talk nominee, though that ABC show's five panellists (Whoopi Goldberg, Joy Behar, Elisabeth Hasselbeck, Sherri Shepherd and Barbara Walters) are sharing a nomination for best host, competing against Ellen DeGeneres, Rachael Ray and Live! co-hosts Regis Philbin and Kelly Ripa.

Nominations for the 36th Annual Daytime Emmys were announced yesterday by the National Academy of Television Arts & Sciences, which administers them.

Overall, PBS led in nominations with 56, followed by ABC (50), syndicated programming (49), CBS (30) and NBC (20).

Vanessa Williams will host the awards broadcast, which will air live from Los Angeles on Aug. 30 on the CW network.

Debbi Morgan (All My Children), Maura West (As the World Turns), Susan Haskell (One Life to Live), Susan Flannery (The Bold and the Beautiful) and Jeanne Cooper (The Young and the Restless) are the nominees for lead actress in a drama series.

Thorsten Kaye (All My Children), Peter Reckell (Days of Our Lives), Anthony Geary (General Hospital), Christian LeBlanc (The Young and the Restless) and Daniel Cosgrove (the soon-to-be ending Guiding Light) are nominated in the lead dramatic actor category.

Public Broadcasting Service dominated the outstanding children's show category with Fetch! With Ruff Ruffman, From the Top at Carnegie Hall and Postcards From Buster, which also included Discovery Kids' Adventure Camp. The lifetime achievement award goes to PBS' Sesame Street.

Drinking tunes for the long weekend

harry.hodge@metronews.ca

Victoria Day weekend is a uniquely Canadian kind of holiday. Summer is just around the corner and we've emerged from our winter slumber. It's also not deadly hot yet, but there is a good possibility some of you will read this before hopping in the car and sitting on the deck at a cottage someplace.

The weekend also is recognized for the pivotal role of a cold brewski. Odds are more than one of you will down a couple of frosty brown pops this weekend, and could be you will also be near some kind of speaker, blasting some kind of tunes.

Metro has outlined for you three songs for some particularly Canadian spots as you celebrate this upcoming long weekend.

No. 1: Motoring along in the vehicle, en route to the cottage, the friend's cottage, the campground, wherever. Depending on distance, you might get through 99 Bottles of Beer on the Wall and still have plenty of time left.

If you want to get the party started and have booze as part of your theme, Cigarettes and Alcohol by Oasis is a fitting starter. Liam Gallagher's wails about "looking for some action/but all I found was cigarettes and alcohol" can be played at any time really, although the lyrics may be less intelligible depending on what point in the weekend this track gets played.

Liam Gallagher

No. 2: The next song on your list should be One Bourbon, One Scotch, One Beer by John Lee Hooker, although I first heard it in my younger days as performed by George Thorogood and the Destroyers. This could either be on your stereo as you're entertaining at the cottage, but is just as likely to be found on the jukebox at the lakeside pub. This celebrates not just beer, but other options for you to savour into the wee hours of a Saturday night bender.

No. 3: Sunday morning. Mouth like cottonballs, where's the Gatorade? Music will wake me up. Sunday Morning Coming Down by Johnny Cash. Breakfast: Greasy eggs and sausage? Hair of the dog? Let's do hair of the dog. You'll all have your own playlists, but one would assume a couple of these are already in there. Have a cold one for me and enjoy Victoria Day everybody!

Ol' Blue Eyes to hit the silver screen

BIOPIC Martin Scorsese will be telling Frank Sinatra's life story on film.

The Academy Award-winning filmmaker will direct Sinatra, the first feature film about Ol' Blue Eyes' life, Universal Pictures and Mandalay Pictures said Wednesday.

The film will be "an unconventional biopic," said Mandalay Pictures president Cathy Shulman, who is co-producing the film with Mandalay chairman Peter Guber.

"It's not a cradle-to-the-grave traditional portrait of the consecutive events in a man's life," Shulman said.

"Instead, it's more of a collage and in many ways it will feel like an album itself. It's a collection of various moments and impressions in his life and together we hope they'll tell the full story and present full themes."

Oscar-nominated screenwriter Phil Alden Robinson (Field of Dreams) has spent "at least a year buried in 30,000 pages of research" to write the screenplay, Schulman said.

No casting decisions have been made and no production starting date has been determined, she said, adding: "It's everyone's hope that this will be a movie that comes to the screen shortly."

It took two years to secure the rights to Sinatra's life and music, Shulman said. Warner Music Group and the Sinatra estate are partners on the project.

Having Scorsese bring Sinatra, who died in 1998, to the screen "seems like a match made in heaven," she said.

"In any family, you're dealing with a precious life and in this case you're dealing with an extraordinary life," she said. "We knew Scorsese would lead the troops to a true, fair, exciting and entertaining portrait of the man."

Sinatra's daughter, Tina, said it was "personally pleasing" to know Scorsese would oversee the celluloid version of her father's life story. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Riverdance's farewell tour

And so it shall end the way it began: with mini-skirted colleens and leather-panted boyos stomping their feet while the audience cheers.

Yes, the big news is that Riverdance — the combination of New Age Irish music, rapid-fire footwork, folksy charm and G-rated sex appeal, which has been pleasing audiences for 15 years — is planning to hang up its shoes ... sort of.

The production that starts performances May 19 at the Canon Theatre is being billed as its "farewell tour" and it's wending its way through every city the show has ever played in Europe and North America, just to say goodbye.

But is this a genuine last kick at the can? Or is it like the tours that Charles Aznavour and Cher keep announcing, only to return as regularly as Wiarton Willie does each Feb. 2?

"No, this is the real thing," insists Julian Erskine, the senior executive producer of all things Riverdance. "There are no plans to return to any of these venues in the immediate future."

But it doesn't mean that those Gaelic feet will go tapping off into the twilight. Far from it.

"Riverdance is moving into new territories," says Erskine. "Just as Europe and North America opened up to us 15 years ago, the Far East is opening up to us now. We tried to get into Asia, South America and Africa before, but we never made it. Now the time is right."

While it's true that some fans will shed a shamrock-shaped tear over its departure, a lot of other people will sigh with relief.

Riverdance became such a huge success so quickly and spawned so many imitators, it was only natural it should also become the butt of endless jokes. As the years rolled on, it seemed like every TV show took a shot at Riverdance, from Family Guy to Buffy the Vampire Slayer.

Then last year, at the Eurovision Song Contest, an Irish children's entertainer named Dustin the Turkey brought down the house when he sang, "Give us another chance, we're sorry for Riverdance!"

The location was significant because it was at Eurovision in 1994 when Riverdance first burst up on an unsuspecting world and turned step-dancing from a folk hobby to a world obsession. The brainchild of producers Moya Doherty and John McColgan, the original impetus behind Riverdance was the need to combine traditional Irish culture with a more modern view of the country itself.

"There was a new Ireland, a more sophisticated Ireland, and we're proud to speak to that," says Erskine proudly.

Victoria Day weekend means plenty of attractions launch for the summer

This weekend kicks off the Wye Marsh summer season with new family-oriented outdoor adventures.

On Monday — Victoria Day — visitors to the Wye Marsh will be able to participate in a variety of outdoor activities and shows including Swans & Cygnets, Spring Strides, snakes and turtles, birds of prey and GPS Animal trivia.

Starting Saturday you can participate in guided Spring Ecotours. These outings include a three to four hour canoe or kayak trip into the far reaches of Wye Marsh. You'll learn about waterfowl habitat, indigenous plant species, and the many benefits of wetlands. Pre-registration is required — make reservations at 705-526-7809 ext. 207 or email reservations@wyemarsh.com.

Kayak eco tours happen every Saturday evening, based on sunset times. Canoe eco tours occur every Sunday morning, from 7 a.m. to 10 a.m. Cost is $50 per person.

But that's not all that's new — starting next week, Wye Marsh will be open late on Thursday nights, until 9 p.m. You can climb the observation tower and watch the sunset, and nature photographers will have a unique opportunity to utilize the perfect light of dusk to photograph the landscape and wildlife that can be seen only at this time of day. Thursday evening activities include a 5:30 p.m. guided canoe tour and a 7 p.m. guided kayak tour. Wye Marsh Wildlife Centre is located in Midland, Ont., in the Wye Valley. For more information on Wye Marsh, visit wyemarsh.com.

Last-minute plans

If you don't have an invite to cottage country this weekend, you can still find Victoria Day weekend deals on the web. Plenty of resorts also have special activities on this weekend to celebrate the official launch of their summer seasons. A great resource to check out is 400eleven.com/long-weekend.html, which provides links to a wide variety of resorts up north.

Another good place to start is georgianbaytourism.on.ca; members of the Georgian Bay Tourism Group are planning a variety of spring getaway packages, events, cruises, and festivals kick off the tourist season along Southern Georgian Bay.

Fly away

Birding season is in full swing around the province as oodles of winged creatures make their way north for the warm months. Presqu'ile provincial park's Warblers and Whimbrels Weekend is among the bird-related events taking place this weekend. Go to friendsofpresquile.on.ca, and under Education, Programs and Events click on Calendar of Events. Alternately, you could head to Point Pelee for the final weekend of its Festival of Birds 2009. you can book activities such as hikes through friendsofpointpelee.com.

Shannen a homewrecker?

SMACKTALK Shannen Doherty has claimed that she only started dating photographer Kurt Iswarienko since he filed for divorce from his wife, designer Taryn Band, last December. But Band's mother seems to remember things differently.

"Shannen broke up a marriage. And that's all I'm going to say," she tells Star magazine.

The magazine also claims that even though he filed for divorce, Iswarienko is still technically married.

Ryan keeps cancer a secret

FAMILY HEARTBREAK Ryan O'Neal has been lying to longtime lover Farrah Fawcett's aged father about the actress' health battle because he wants the 91-year-old to remain confident his daughter will beat cancer, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

James Fawcett is awaiting the medical OK to fly to the ailing star's bedside in Los Angeles from his Texas home — and actor O'Neal fears he'll be shocked when he sees his sick daughter, who is losing her battle with anal cancer.

In a new TV interview, filmed to promote Friday's broadcast of Farrah's Story, O'Neal says, "He (Fawcett's father) has big confidence that she will recover.

"He believes that and I tell him that too. I lie to him ... I lie to her father because you're supposed to go before your children, so they say."

Asked if he believes that, O'Neal says, "No, I don't."

Gotti family faces foreclosure on mansion

REMEMBER THEM? Now that a New York State Appellate Court ruling lead to foreclosure on Victoria Gotti's Long Island mansion — the five-bedroom, 5½-bath white brick residence familiar to viewers of her 2004 Growing Up Gotti reality show — the daughter of late mob boss John Gotti declares, "This is by no means over," people.com reports.

Speaking outside Brooklyn Federal Court on Wednesday, after a hearing over her $650,000 US debt to housing lender JPMorgan Chase, Gotti, 46, said, "I'm never going to lose the house — trust me," reports the New York Post and Daily News. "The only way I'm leaving is selling it, and we wanted out of there, anyway."

The house currently is on the market for $3.2 million.

When word of Gotti's housing problem became public earlier this week, the so-called Mafia Princess told Newsday, "I'm bitter. The house, all the marital assets, are part of a divorce package (from ex-husband, Carmine Agnello) I have never seen yet." METRO NEWS SERVICES

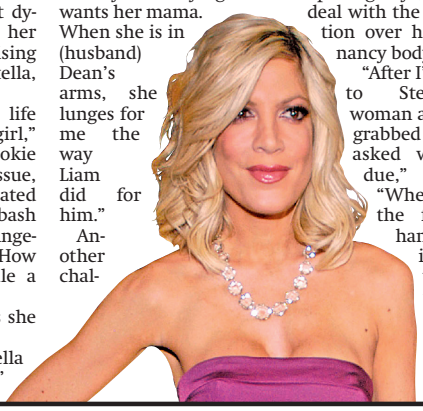
Tori spills on motherhood fears

GENERATIONS Her relationship with mom Candy has been rocky at times — and Tori Spelling says that dynamic concerned her when it came to raising her own daughter, Stella, people.com reports.

"My biggest fear in life was having a girl," Spelling, 35, tells Cookie Magazine for its June issue, which she celebrated Wednesday during a bash at the Kitson in Los Angeles with her family. "How was I going to handle a girl?"

But, now she knows she didn't have to worry.

"It turns out that Stella is a total mama's girl," she says of her 11-month-old. "For all my fears, without my even trying, Stella wants her mama. When she is in (husband) Dean's arms, she lunges for me the way Liam did for him."



Another challenge after becoming a mom for the second time, Spelling says, was how to deal with the public attention over her post-pregnancy body.

"After I'd given birth to Stella, some woman at the market grabbed my belly and asked when I was due," she says. "When she had the flab in her hand, she realized her mistake. And the first time I went out after I had Liam, the paparazzi were around and I remember trying to hold my stomach in, even though my muscles were shot to hell."

But it was not just the press who was interested in her body. "During both pregnancies, people touched my belly a lot," Spelling says. "I would never do that to a pregnant woman — it's a personal thing. And if I did, I'd say, 'Your belly is so cute, can I touch it?'"

But the actress says she came to accept (and appreciate) the attention. "At a certain point, " she says, "I just decided that Stella was getting a lot of love in there." METRO WORLD NEWS

Madge and Jesus planning secret Kabalah ceremony?

MOVING FAST Rumours started circulating recently about Madonna and her Brazilian model boyfriend, Jesus Luz, planning some sort of ceremony together, and now Luz's father has confirmed it.

"The Kabbalah ceremony (that) will link up my son Jesus Luz and Madonna only confirms that he is extremely happy," Heiter Pinto da Luz tells Brazil's Quem magazine.

"I don't know if there will, in fact, be a real marriage between Madonna and my son.

"It will be a type of ritual, but I do not know Kabbalah (or if the ceremony) will have legal validity."

Palin comes to Prejean's aid

NO SURPRISE Miss California Carrie Prejean has Sarah Palin on her side, usmagazine.com reports.

The conservative Alaska governor released a statement Wednesday night (as picked up by Fox News) slamming "the liberal onslaught of malicious attacks" against Prejean, 21, who first ignited controversy for coming out against same-sex marriage at last month's Miss USA pageant.

"I can relate, as a liberal target myself," Palin said. "What I find so remarkable is that these politically motivated attacks fail to show that what Carrie and I believe is also what President Obama and Secretary Clinton believe — marriage is between a man and a woman."

Continued Palin: "I applaud Donald Trump for standing with Carrie during this time. And I respect Carrie for standing strong and staying true to herself, and for not letting those who disagree with her deny her protection under the nation's First Amendment Rights.

"Our Constitution protects us all — not just those who agree with the far left," Palin went on.

On Tuesday, Trump announced at a press conference that Prejean would keep her crown despite the release of topless photos. Miss California pageant director Shanna Moakler resigned her position the day after, telling usmagazine.com she "no longer believes" in the Miss Universe organization.

Last week, Prejean's dad told E! Online that Palin personally called his daughter, but didn't release details of their phone conversation.

Bullock jokes she was far from impressed with her hunky co-star's body.

She joked, "Ryan's surgically enhanced, overly tanned and a bit soft around the middle — and the back hair was a bit much to deal with.

"I'd put him at a four on a scale of one to 10."

Rob and nanny settle suit

HE SAID, SHE SAID Rob Lowe's legal battle with a nanny, Laura Boyce, is also over, people.com reports.

Superior Court records show that attorneys for both sides have requested the entire case be dismissed. It's unclear if a financial settlement was involved. Lawyers for both sides had no comment.

Lowe, 45, had sued Boyce in April 2008 for defamation and violating her confidentiality agreement, while Boyce alleged sexual harassment by his wife, Sheryl, accusing the actor's wife of using racial and sexual epithets during her seven-month employment with the Lowes.

Sheryl Lowe denied any wrongdoing, and multiple witnesses provided sworn statements that it was Boyce who frequently used the N-word, the website reports.

Jay's high-security scare at hospital

CRAZY FAN? Jay Leno's recent hospital stay turned into a high-security operation when a fake priest tried to gain access to the comedian's private room, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

The comedian was forced to cancel a recent late-night show after medical bosses at TV network NBC ruled he was too sick with a fever to host the Tonight Show.

Leno was taken to a hospital near the studio where he tapes the show and now reveals a weird stalker almost got past staff by pretending to be a man of the cloth.

Appearing on Ellen DeGeneres' show this week, he explained, "I'm lying in the bed ... and I hear, 'I'm Mr. Leno's priest; I'm here to see him.' Well, I'm not even Catholic."

A quick-thinking nurse realized the mystery man was a fake when she quizzed him about his religion. Leno still finds the story funny, but TV bosses at NBC didn't — and they boosted security outside Leno's room after the incident.

Ex-wife opens up about Hoff's hospitalization

AFTERMATH Pamela Bach opened up about her exhusband for the first time since David Hasselhoff was reportedly rushed to the hospital with alcohol poisoning on May 2, usmagazine.com reports.

"All I can say is that I let go ... and that all I give is my love and support, and he will always be the father of my children, and I love him because he is the father of my children," she told usmagazine.com. "But most importantly, because of my kids."

Although it was reported that Bach — who lives 10 minutes away from Hasselhoff's home in Encino, Calif. — rushed to take her estranged husband to the hospital after his daughter Hayley, 16, found him unconscious with a .39 blood alcohol level, his lawyers claim he was never in such a condition.

"Mr. Hasselhoff is both disturbed and saddened by the fact that a certain individual is disseminating grossly inaccurate stories about him to the press for ulterior motives," his lawyers told Us.

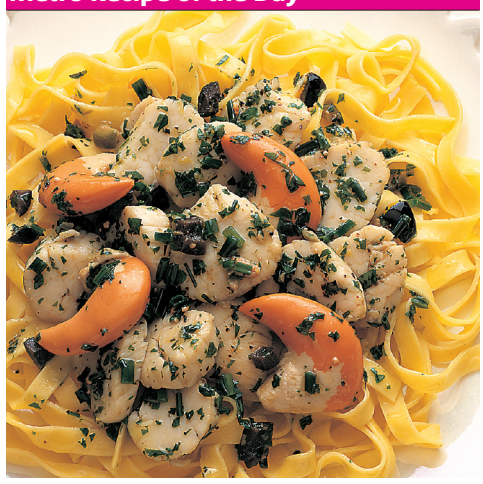
Metro Recipe of the Day



Scallops with Herb Dressing

INGREDIENTS:
1 lb (450 g) fresh scallops
12 oz (335 g) dried tagliatelle
3 tbsp (45 ml) olive oil

DRESSING:
Bunch of parsley
Bunch of mint
Bunch of chives
1 lemon
2 tbsp (25 ml) wine vinegar
5 tbsp (75 ml) olive oil
1 tbsp (15 ml) capers
6 large pitted black olives
Salt and black pepper

METHOD:
1. Put large pot of water on to boil. For dressing, rinse and dry herbs. Chop parsley and mint, snip chives and put in measuring cup; you need 3/4 cup (175 ml).
2. Grate lemon rind and add to measuring cup with vinegar and olive oil. Roughly chop capers and olives and add, then season to taste with salt and black pepper, mix and set aside.
3. Check each scallop has had muscle removed, then rinse and dry.
4. Add pasta to boiling water and cook according to package instructions.
5. Meanwhile, heat olive oil in large frying pan over high heat and fry scallops 4–6 minutes until lightly browned and just cooked through.
6. Remove from heat and pour on dressing. Drain pasta well and serve topped with dressed scallops.

ARIES ♈
MARCH 21-APRIL 20
If you don't like the fact that someone with less experience is trying to tell you what to do, then let them know. You don't have to be rude about it.

TAURUS ♉
APRIL 21-MAY 21
You may be tempted to act first and ask questions later but the planets warn that might not be wise. If you have doubts, take plenty of time before deciding.

GEMINI ♊
MAY 22-JUNE 21
Honesty may be the best policy but it's liable to make matters worse today, so lie if you must; console yourself that on this occasion, it's for a good cause.

CANCER ♋
JUNE 22-JULY 22
If you give too much away today you could find later on that someone has stolen your big idea for their own profit and glorification.

LEO ♌
JULY 23-AUG 23
You may be desperate to prove you're not just a one-trick pony, but don't take on too much too soon. The world thinks you're doing fine as you are.

VIRGO ♍
AUG 24-SEPT 22
Stay focused on your number one priority. Others may try to distract you today but the only thing that matters is reaching that goal you have set yourself.

LIBRA ♎
SEPT 23-OCT 23
Certain people seem to be going out of their way to undermine your confidence, but they won't succeed. By mid-next week you'll be more self-assured.

SCORPIO ♏
OCT 24-NOV 22
Is someone trying to cheat you? It's possible, but it's just as likely they're as confused as you are. Either way, don't assume you will get a fair deal today.

SAGITTARIUS ♐
NOV 23-DEC 21
You took on a lot of new responsibilities recently and you may be wondering if it was such a good idea. But you made your choice and you must live with it.

CAPRICORN ♑
DEC 22-JAN 20
Don't stray too far from the straight and narrow today. If you stick to the rules you'll do OK, if not quite as spectacularly as you had hoped.

AQUARIUS ♒
JAN 21-FEB 18
Maybe not everything has gone your way of late but life moves in cycles and it won't be long before you are on the upside of the curve again.

PISCES ♓
FEB 19-MARCH 20
Someone may deserve to feel the edge of your tongue but think carefully before you lash out. Build them up, don't knock them down.
